

5th Passivhaus Congress online

Summary of the national conference via social media. Technical and commercial highlights.

The context

Sustainable construction moves at its own pace. Every project reminds us that major changes do not come from spectacular gestures, but from design decisions made some five years before handover. A building's memory is built much like a person's memory: piece by piece, mindful of the entire life cycle.

What we take away

Each note is a fragment of our internal reasoning. We do not publish articles to generate traffic, but to document the process. If you find a useful idea, writing it down has already been worthwhile.

If you want to go deeper, get in touch with us. Every project starts with a conversation.

Building well costs the same as building badly. The difference lies in the decision you make on the first drawing.
